The reputation of Toni Schiesser, Germany's dynamic woman couturière who has over 100 employees in her workrooms, has become even more firmly established in the fashion world as a result of this season's outstanding collection. Having, like Chanel or Balmain, never made any concessions to recent "popular" fashions, she is obviously delighted at the return of elegant, "ladylike" fashions, to which she adds her own very personal touch with her inimitable flair for flattering wearability. Consequently the Autumn/Winter fashion showing, which the charming couturière held in the Frankfurter Hof in Frankfurt ●●● as usual, lived up to the fashion world's high expectations, and fashionable society from the financial, business and diplomatic circles to which Toni Schiesser's large clientele mainly belongs, was lavish in its spontaneous and wholehearted approval. Not only did the coats, suits and outfits in striking fabrics—often with rich fur trimmings dyed in the same shade as the material—show superlative chic, but the gala gowns all possessed that unmistakable aura of femininity and charm characteristic of Toni Schiesser's evening models, combined with her consummate skill in working mainly ●●● with priceless embroideries and laces, for the most part made in Switzerland. With an almost intuitive touch she handles guipure, cut-out embroidery, spangled and other types of embroidery and succeeds through clever cutting and skilful understatement in bringing out the beauty of these textile specialities. The "Grande Dame" of German couture not only gives her attention to the minutest fashion details in her creations, but styles them with a view to pleasing and flattering her many clients, who consequently willingly and unquestioningly accept the fashion dictates of this experienced and gifted couturière !
