

Rigilied

Autor(en): [s.n.]

Objektyp: Article

Zeitschrift: Helvetia : magazine of the Swiss Society of New Zealand

Band (Jahr): 74 (2008)

Heft [3]

PDF erstellt am: 08.08.2024

Persistenter Link: <https://doi.org/10.5169/seals-943628>

Nutzungsbedingungen

Die ETH-Bibliothek ist Anbieterin der digitalisierten Zeitschriften. Sie besitzt keine Urheberrechte an den Inhalten der Zeitschriften. Die Rechte liegen in der Regel bei den Herausgebern.

Die auf der Plattform e-periodica veröffentlichten Dokumente stehen für nicht-kommerzielle Zwecke in Lehre und Forschung sowie für die private Nutzung frei zur Verfügung. Einzelne Dateien oder Ausdrucke aus diesem Angebot können zusammen mit diesen Nutzungsbedingungen und den korrekten Herkunftsbezeichnungen weitergegeben werden.

Das Veröffentlichen von Bildern in Print- und Online-Publikationen ist nur mit vorheriger Genehmigung der Rechteinhaber erlaubt. Die systematische Speicherung von Teilen des elektronischen Angebots auf anderen Servern bedarf ebenfalls des schriftlichen Einverständnisses der Rechteinhaber.

Haftungsausschluss

Alle Angaben erfolgen ohne Gewähr für Vollständigkeit oder Richtigkeit. Es wird keine Haftung übernommen für Schäden durch die Verwendung von Informationen aus diesem Online-Angebot oder durch das Fehlen von Informationen. Dies gilt auch für Inhalte Dritter, die über dieses Angebot zugänglich sind.

Basel it like Beckham

Millions of filmgoers know the story of the Indian girl who defied her parents to play football, but not many know that the film's inspiration lives in Switzerland.

As millions watched the Fifa 2007 Women's World Cup in China, Permi Jhooti - the first Asian female professional in England and a Fifa ambassador - welcomes the progress made in women's football. She now plays for Concordia Basel. The 36-year-old has lived in Basel since 2005 - when her husband started a job with pharmaceuticals giant Novartis - and when she is not on the pitch she works at the university's heart research department as an IT specialist.

Permi Jhooti has settled into Basel - on and off the pitch

In Bend it Like Beckham, family tensions arise when the younger daughter becomes more interested in free kicks than the recipe for aloo ghoobi. Jhooti says this was the same in her house, although she admits that her parents, who emigrated from India to England, did let her attend training sessions.

"But it was hard work," she told swissinfo. "On the one hand they wanted to support me and help me realise my ambitions - as many Indian immigrant families do. But on the other they also wanted to protect me from the outside world, from possible racism and other dangers. It's still rare for Asian girls to take part in this 'men's sport'."

Jhooti stuck at it and became the first female Asian professional in England, playing for the women's teams of London clubs Fulham, Millwall and Chelsea.

Nevertheless her mother wanted her to hang up her boots, believing a young woman must "marry and have children". But Jhooti chose football. She did eventually get married - albeit to a white Englishman, not an Indian. Jhooti said this was a bitter pill for her parents, who as immigrants in the 1960s had often been humiliated by the English. But she says her mother has since taken her son-in-law to her heart.

Today Jhooti plays for Concordia Basel's women's team. But as an ambassador for Fifa, world football's governing body, she travels around the world, helping to build women's clubs and leagues. She is also planning to visit her parents' homeland. "In India there are also many young women who want to play football. But first of all the infrastructure must be created."

After the opening game of the 2007 Women's World Cup, Sepp Blatter, the Swiss president of Fifa, called for the tournament to be expanded from 16 teams to 24. "We have realised that in all countries of the world, women can play football. And they also play football where their culture will not permit them to play in public," he said.

But Jhooti says that despite progress, women's football remains a minority sport. "[Women] have a similar problem to that of Swiss men: the Italian, Spanish and English leagues are so strong that at a national level the Swiss clubs have hardly got a chance." But she is optimistic, although she admits that "football is not for women" attitudes still exist. "When I started, there were few opportunities for women. Things are different now - also in Switzerland. People previously said tennis was a man's sport - nowadays men and women receive the same prize money at the big tournaments."

Jhooti also believes football can be a good means for foreigners to integrate in a new country - although she acknowledges that racism in football exists. "Every immigrant has to make an effort to get to grips with their new homeland," she said, adding that they shouldn't simply wait until Switzerland offers them something. "I'm learning German and French and I'm also trying to make personal contacts with Swiss people at work and at the football club." And so far she has had only positive experiences. "The people here are open and friendly - there is a great sense of community."

Women's football is still a minority sport but it is booming in Switzerland. Since 2003 the number of registered players has doubled to almost 18,000. At this rate football will soon become the most popular sport among Swiss females.

The 2007 Women's World Cup took place in China from September 10-30. Sixteen countries participated, with Germany beating Brazil 2-0 in the final.

from swissinfo

Rigilied

Vo Luzern gäge Weggis zue
brucht mer währli keini Schue.

Z Weggis fot das Stiige-n-a mit eusere Jumpfere Hopsassa.

"Brüeder laufed nid eso
mer möged susch nid noch cho.

Im Chaltebad do chert me-n-i und trinkt es Glesli guete Wüi

und dänkt, mer weli bliibe do mer möge nümme uf d'Rigi gehö.

Und wo mer sind uf d'Rigi cho
so lauft is s Sännemeitschi no.

Es treit is Alperöseli na
und seit, es heg de no kei Ma.

De Ludi het em s Blüemli gno, das wird no suuber usecho.

Jetzt darf er nümme-n-uf d Rigi goh,
susch treit em s Meitschi s Buebli no.