

Propertius 4.8.77f.

Autor(en): Kershaw, Allan

Objektyp: Article

Zeitschrift: Museum Helveticum : schweizerische Zeitschrift für klassische Altertumswissenschaft = Revue suisse pour l'étude de l'antiquité classique = Rivista svizzera di filologia classica

Band (Jahr): 51 (1994)

Heft 3

PDF erstellt am: 11.07.2024

Persistenter Link: <https://doi.org/10.5169/seals-39790>

Nutzungsbedingungen

Die ETH-Bibliothek ist Anbieterin der digitalisierten Zeitschriften. Sie besitzt keine Urheberrechte an den Inhalten der Zeitschriften. Die Rechte liegen in der Regel bei den Herausgebern.

Die auf der Plattform e-periodica veröffentlichten Dokumente stehen für nicht-kommerzielle Zwecke in Lehre und Forschung sowie für die private Nutzung frei zur Verfügung. Einzelne Dateien oder Ausdrucke aus diesem Angebot können zusammen mit diesen Nutzungsbedingungen und den korrekten Herkunftsbezeichnungen weitergegeben werden.

Das Veröffentlichen von Bildern in Print- und Online-Publikationen ist nur mit vorheriger Genehmigung der Rechteinhaber erlaubt. Die systematische Speicherung von Teilen des elektronischen Angebots auf anderen Servern bedarf ebenfalls des schriftlichen Einverständnisses der Rechteinhaber.

Haftungsausschluss

Alle Angaben erfolgen ohne Gewähr für Vollständigkeit oder Richtigkeit. Es wird keine Haftung übernommen für Schäden durch die Verwendung von Informationen aus diesem Online-Angebot oder durch das Fehlen von Informationen. Dies gilt auch für Inhalte Dritter, die über dieses Angebot zugänglich sind.

All we can say with confidence is that the Greek game πόλεις may have been the same as, or very like, *LL*⁴⁶.

46 I must here express my thanks to Professor Heinz Hofmann, who invited me to read an earlier version of this paper at a celebration on 25th April 1992 in Groningen to mark the retirement of our friend, Dr. H. Schoonhoven; to Professor Margarethe Billerbeck, who secured me photocopies of obscure publications; to the Director of the Beethoven-Gymnasium in Bonn, who provided me with a copy of a paper by A. Schmitt, “Spiele wie die Römer spielten”, Jahresbericht des Beethoven-Gymnasiums (1977-78) 17-33, which constructs modern games with the information we have on Roman games; and to drs. J. P. Jongejan, who sent me a photograph of a tabula for LL at Rome. I am obliged to the editors’ referees for some useful criticisms and alternative ideas. They suggested I refer readers also to J. Väterlein, Roma ludens. Kinder und Erwachsene beim Spiel im antiken Rom, Heuremata 5 (Amsterdam 1976) and the review by H. Herter in Gnomon 50 (1978) 675-678.

Propertius 4.8.77f.

By Allan Kershaw, Pennsylvania State University

Cynthia lays down the law:

*colla cave inflectas ad summum obliqua theatrum,
aut lectica tuae sudet aperta morae.*

Sudet has been most recently, and roundly, condemned by W. S. Watt (Mus-Helv 49, 1992, 238): “Editors who defend sudet are wasting their effort; it is quite certainly corrupt.” Two problems, it seems to me, remain: one concerns the text, the other interpretation.

First, the variant operta (V²Vo) has in modern times been disregarded. This neglect might be the result of Lachmann’s comment, “Operta scribas an aperta nihil interest. Puellae vehebantur in operta lectica, quae aperitur, cum deposita est ad colloquendum.” I suggest that the choice of word here is of great importance to the understanding of this couplet. As part of her formula legis (4.8.74) Cynthia forbids Propertius to look for other girls under any circumstances; whether they are on open view in the theatre (77), or, quite the contrary, they are concealed from view in a closed carriage.

This contrast between what is readily visible and what is not appears elsewhere in Propertius (2.15.5f.):

nam modo nudatis mecumst luctata papillis, interdum tunica duxit operta moram.

A passage not only of interest for the diction, but one which also points to the meaning of mora in our present passage. At Propertius 2.15.6 (above), the love-making is real enough, but even if sexual activity is only anticipated the erotic nuance of mora is not necessarily precluded; cf. (e.g.) Ovid (Ars 3.473f.):

postque brevem rescribe moram: mora semper amantes incitat, exiguum si modo tempus habet.

Mora in our passage should be understood as a period during which sexual expectations are heightened; it is not so much Propertius' tardiness but the reason for it that bothers Cynthia.

If this interpretation of mora is correct, Gruter's se det for sudet fits nicely, since dare, as is well known, also has an erotic sense. Read aut lectica tuae se det operta morae.

Morae I take to be 'dative of the object for which', with tuae replacing the more usual tibi. The real import of the line being "don't let a closed litter offer itself to you as a sexually exciting interlude". This sense is very close to that offered by Professor Watt's (tentative) spem det (loc. cit. above). Spem, however, would take away from the double-entendre; as it is, both se det and morae are deliberately, and suggestively, open.