Robert Gober's Edition for

Parkett is a replica of a page in the weekend edition of the New York Times. The artist has assembled and invented a mixture of news items, advertisements, weather reports, and stock market news for October 4, 1960. In the midst of wedding announcements and an item on Runt, a teenager's dog that was the victim of veterinary malpractice, we find a story on the mysterious death of a six-year-old boy, whose namesake is the artist himself, born in 1954. We are confronted with Gober's evocation of daily life that oscillates between the utter banality of domestic happiness and sordid drama. We react with indifference, or with a sense of self-indulgent or horrified identification.

Robert Gobers Edition für

Parkett ist die Replik einer Zeitungsseite. Man liest vom Künstler zusammengestellte und erfundene vermischte Meldungen, Reklamen, Wetter- und Börsenberichte in der Nachahmung einer Seite aus der Wochenendausgabe von The New York Times vom 4. Oktober 1960. Im Kontext des Heiratsklatsches der gehobenen Gesellschaft und der Nachricht des Todes von Runt, dem Hund eines Teenagers, der durch den Kunstfehler eines Veterinärs verendete, finden wir die Mitteilung vom mysteriösen Tod eines sechsjährigen Knaben mit dem Namen unseres ebenfalls 1954 geborenen Künstlers. Wir werden mit Gobers Evokation der Alltäglichkeit konfrontiert, die zwischen absoluter Banalität, häuslichem Glück und abgründigem Drama oszilliert und worauf wir gleichgültig reagieren oder in wohliger oder erschreckter Identifikation.

Girl Lived in a Closet, California Police Say

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Oct. 28 (AP) — A 12-year-old girl has been found locked in a filthy closet, where the police say, her parents kept her confined for much of her life.

The girl was found Monday night in the reeking, cockroach-infested closet, which was kept closed by a bent nail, said Sgt. Jennifer Kauffman of the San Bernardino police.

Her parents, Joseph and Sandra Saucedo, were charged Wednesday with felony child endangerment, and the father also was charged with felony child abuse, Ms. Kauffman said.

The police were tipped by a relative. When they asked the Saucedos to show them the girl, they took officers to the closet, Ms. Kauffman said.

Officers said the girl was lying in her own feces and wore a urine-stained sweatshirt.

Investigators say the child rarely left the closet and had probably been kept locked up at other homes where the family lived during the past decade, Ms. Kauffman said.

"Obviously, it's a terrible, traumatic condition," said Sgt. Bob Evans. "It will probably take years to recover from."

The couple was held in this city 60 miles east of Los Angeles in lieu of $50,000 bail each.

The girl, whose name was not disclosed, had six brothers and sisters, ages 2 months to 15 years, were turned over to the county Child Protective Services. There was no evidence that the other children were abused, Ms. Kauffman said.

Joseph Saucedo, 33, denied that he and his 31-year-old wife abused their daughter. He said the closet was not a cell and that his family was a loving one.

Teen Watches as Dog Is Killed With Wrong Injection by Vet

FORT WORTH, Sept. 29 (AP) — A 16-year-old boy who took his dog to the veterinarian for a rabies vaccination watched as his pet was mistakenly put to sleep.

"It was a real tragedy, very serious," said Dr. Keith Sultemier, the veterinarian who operates the clinic in Aris, northwest of Fort Worth.

Tom McCarty, 15 years old, and his mother took their 2½-year-old dog, a pit bull and chow mix named Runt, to the clinic on Thursday about the same time another similar dog, a female mix of pit bull and chow, was taken for euthanasia, Dr. Sultemier said.

The boy was with Runt when the dog got the lethal injection instead of the rabies shot. "The lady and her son came in with a dog for a fairly straightforward vaccination and walked out without the dog," Dr. Sultemier said.

"We are at fault," Dr. Sultemier said. The veterinarian bought the boy a full-blooded chow puppy. The boy, Pam Peyton, said she would not sue.

Metropolitan Forecast

High pressure over the South will direct unseasonably warm air into the region this weekend. Aside from a few high clouds, skies will be clear and temperatures will average more than 15 degrees above normal. A cold front will reach northern New York state tomorrow and may cross the region early next week.

New York City: Today, sunny, breezy, warmer. High 83. Tonight, clear, quite mild. Low 64. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, very warm. High 85.

Long Island: Today, sunny, breezy, warmer. High 81. Tonight, clear, quite mild. Low 61. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, very warm. High 83.

Westchester and Rockland: Today, sunny, breezy, warmer. High 79. Tonight, clear, quite mild. Low 58. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, very warm. High 81.

New Jersey: Today, sunny, breezy, warmer. High 84. Tonight, clear, quite mild. Low 62. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, very warm. High 87.

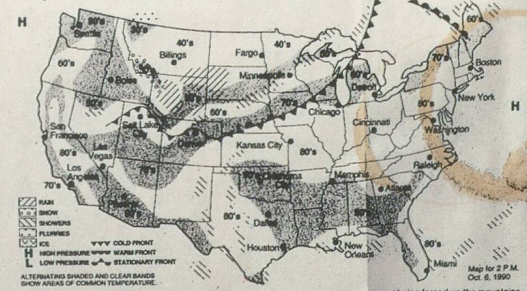

Connecticut: Today, sunny, breezy, warmer. High 80. Tonight, clear, quite mild. Low 59. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, very warm. High 83.

Extended Forecast: Monday and Tuesday will continue to be unseasonably warm, though cloudy. Showers are possible later Tuesday as a cold front reaches the region.

National Forecast

Powerful winds coursing through the northern Rockies gustated to 87 miles an hour at Chateau, Mont., on Thursday, a precursor to a strong cold front coming ashore in the Pacific Northwest. Today, the upper-level reflection of the front, marked by a southwest sag in the jet stream from Montana to northern California, will shift through tomorrow morning. In response, high-level winds will blow from the central Rockies to the Great Lakes, impeding the eastward advance of the cold front. The delay of the front will allow area of high pressure off the Middle Atlantic Seaboard to act like a heat pump, fostering sunny, unseasonably warm weather in the Northeast this weekend. Handily, but not significantly, across the region before Monday, owing to the fact that moist air will have to take a circuitous route, slowly spreading north from the western Gulf Coast and then northeast from the lower Mississippi Valley.

The only snag in the weather pattern in the Northeast is the arrival of clouds and showers in northern New England. The cause of the showers there is the collision of cool air that is moving across eastern Canada and warm air from the heat pump high off the Middle Atlantic Coast.

In the wake of the sluggish front, cold air will continue to gather in the northern Rockies. Snow, caused by winds from the east being forced up the mountains, will last in the Tetons of Wyoming, the glens of Montana and in Yellowstone Valley, where two large forest fires, fanned by gale-force winds, were out of control on Friday.

Meanwhile, a disturbance from Mexico will spread showers into parts of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. In the tropics, Hurricane Klaus will continue to drift northward in the Caribbean.
