THE AEROPLANE IN THE SERVICE OF MOUNTAINEERING.

MOUNTAINEERING. Thanks to a permission from the Federal Department for Military Aviation an interesting experiment has successfully been carried out with the aid of military pilots. The aim was to discover four members of a ski-ing expedition which were "lost" somewhere in the regions of the Churfirsten. Half an hour after leaving Dübendorf the aeroplane, having on board a pilot and an observer, discovered the four men and rendered first-aid services by dropping parcels of food, rugs, etc.

Afterwards the aeroplane signalled to a group of ski-ing members of the Alpine Club stationed at Unterwards the aeroplane signalled to a group of ski-ing members of the Alpine Club stationed at Unterwards, giving them the exact position of the "lost" men, and a ski-ing team arrived at the indicated spot within a short time. This first experiment in discovering lost alpinists with the aid of aeroplanes has left the conviction in the minds of all the participants that it has more than proved its efficiency in this instance and might usefully be employed in even more difficult cases. Similar expeditions will en-able our military aviators to fulfil in times of peace a most useful aim which will find sympathy in all quarters.

in all quarters. Further experiments are proposed in other parts of the mountains and under more difficult conditions and it is hoped that the results will lead to the formation of a definite organisation for the specific purpose of establishing a service for the discovery of lost mountaineers. Dr. Uhlmann, of Riehen, and his family travelled by car from Waldenburg to Langen-bruck. Near the Klus, just before Langenbruck, the car skidded on the frozen road and fell into the Frenke ravine. After several somersaults, the car landed at the bottom on its wheels. Dr. Uhlmann's father in-law succumbed after a few moments, while Dr. Uhlmann, his wife and her mother were slightly injured. The children in the car escaped damage.

Farmer Gottfried Wenger, a former Councillor, of Langgarben near Diegten has died as the result of a most curious case of injury. A bundle of straw fell on to him and brushed his face.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 22, 1930.

Some weeks later, great pain racked his head and, after two operations, it was found that a piece of straw had penetrated the brain through the ear.

ST. GALL.

ST. GALL. A heavy landslide occurred at Quinten between the hamlets Au and Schilt. Great damage was caused, particularly in the surrounding woods. Part of the very costly re-afforestation carried out during the last few years was des-troyed. This is the third landslide within the last two years, and experts are thereby confirmed in their onjunct that the planned read shore the in their opinion that the planned road along the right hand border of the Walensee is not a sound proposition. NOTES AND GLEANINGS. By KYBURG.

PRICE 3d.

Leonard Adolf Frenken (1885-1930)

A sudden attack of Angina put an untimely sudden end to one of the most lovable friends Kyburg has had the good fortune of knowing. Leo.Adolf Frenken is dead and I feel sure that Kyburg has had the good fortune of knowing. Leo Adolf Frenken is dead and I feel sure that the grievous news will be a great shock to all those who have met him at one time or another. A man in the prime of his life, a sportsman in the true sense of the word if ever there was such a one, a passionate lover of his native country Switzer-land, Frenken leaves a great and terrible void be-hind him. Kyburg has lost in him his best Swiss friend in our Colony, a chum of long gone-bye school days and mere words are utterly futile to describe the feeling of blank loneliness and gloom which were almost overpowering when we laid the earthly remains of our friend to rest on Friday, 14th inst. at South Norwood Cemetery, high up near the Church on the Hill, in a spot over-shadowed by an old elm-tree, a beautiful site and one which Leo would have chosen himself surely, if he had known. Frenken came to England in 1907 and leaves a widow and two children. He was well-known especially in Tennis and later in Golfing circles, his handicap at Golf being as low as 3. Farewell, old friend, gone from us much too soon. too soon.

Professor Albisser of Lucerne writes that a Message of Good Will from English scholars ad-dressed to the scholars of the world was pub-lished in the Swiss Teachers' Journal and also in the Cantonal Press for Lucerne. He sends to THE SCHOLMASTER AND WOMAN TEACHER'S CHRONICLE three letters from pupils in his col-lege reciprocating those good wishes. He sug-gests that one or more of them should be published and copies of the issue containing them sent to Lucerne.

A MESSAGE OF GOOD-WILL, 1929.

A MESSAGE OF GOOD-WILL, 1929. "My dear young English people. "Here, in our schoolroom on Thursday, September 24, 1929, we have received your mes-sage sending Good Luck and Affectionate Re-gards. We know you either from radio, from illustrations, from books or from school in-struction, although we are separated from your beloved Fatherland by many lands and by an arm of the sea. We know that the Army of your esteemed people in the World War performed great deeds in the fearfully destructive battlefields of the earth. It is for us a great joy to have in our midst the League War performed great deeds in the fearfully destructive battlefields of the earth. It is for us a great joy to have in our midst the League of Nations which has already taken good action in regard to danger threatening conflicts. Freedom shall find entrance to the people of all Nations of the Earth, in spite of the fact that in every State, large or small, large sums of money are wasted on the disgrace of War. Is it not possible to create a feeling of peace amongst all people? But perhaps most un-happily 'many years may pass before that distrust between nations, which, like a dreadful wild beast, holds us in thraldom, shall have vanished from the cold-blooded hearts of men. We have heard also about your unconquerable mighty Navy which is a great triumph for modern English technical craftsmanship. But is it not a shame to spend so much money on such an object? But we believe that this squandering of money cannot be stopped until all nations are fully impressed with the need to trust one another. This seems to us essential when all the nations of Europe feel that they must protect themselves against a threatening real danger. So we join with you in your cheery message: ' Peace shall reign amongst real danger. So we join with you in your cheery message: 'Peace shall reign amongst all the mighty nations of the Earth,' and we greet you in the name of the peace-loving youth of Lucerne.'' HUGO BREITSCHMID of Lucerne." HUGO BREITSCHMID I print the above because it contains that very wonderful and true sentiment, "Is it not possible to create a feeling of peace amongst all people?" Let us hammer it in, all the time, everywhere! Let's talk Peace and Peace only and slowly, per-haps, but surely, the world will get used to Peace.

Dr. Adolf Keller's Visit:

British Weekly, 6th Feb. I think it right that the following article should be brought to the notice of our readers, because Dr. A. Keller has done and continues doing a very great deal of really first-class work on behalf of religion.
