FEDERAL.

SWISS BANKING ACT.

SWISS BANKING ACT. The so-called "Banking Act" became law in Switzerland on March 1st. It enables the Swiss National Bank and a special Banking Committee to keep an eye on all banks in Switzerland, so as to protect the public — that is, their savings. Switzerland has never known anything like this Banking Act before, banks being able to act with moneys entrusted to them as they thought right. It would be wrong to say that the new Bank-ing Act enables the National Bank and the Com-mittee to supervise the affairs of banks in every respect, for this was not intended. Banks can carry on their business as usual, but the Banking Act gives both bodies mentioned above sufficient powers to interfere in specific cases when found powers to interfere in specific cases when found advisable.

advisable. Thus the Act contains a decree which regu-lates capital export. Accordingly, a bank must get in touch with the National Bank before it is allowed to place money abroad amounting to Frs. 10,000,000 and more. The National Bank can stop the transaction the transaction.

Special regulations deal with the administration of a bank and the liquidity of assets. The question as to how much has to be allocated to reserves out of profits is also dealt with in detail. reserves out of profits is also deart with in defail. From now on, banks with a balance-sheet sum of Fvs. 20,000,000 and more are compelled to issue balance-sheet and profit and loss account half-yearly, and banks with a balance-sheet sum totalling Fvs. 100,000,000 and more even quarterly.

totaling Frs.100,000,000 and more even quarterly. At the end of a trading year ,balance-sheet and profit and loss account covering the whole year, must be sent to the National Bank for inspection. Balance-sheets and profit and loss accounts have to be made up in the same fashion by all banks. By way of interest it is worth while men-tioning that assets have to be divided into 19 and Habilities into 17 separate items. Another new provision is that the accounts must be checked by revisers unconnected with the bank in question and accredited by the State, and not by any andiand accredited by the State, and not by any auditors as hitherto.

FASCIST MILITIAS,

FASCIST MILITIAS. The Swiss Supreme Court has rejected an appeal of the various Fascist groups against a decree of the Cantonal Government of Zürich pro-hibiting the private militias organised like the German Storn Troops. The plaintiffs invoked the Swiss Constitution, which guarantees the freedom of association, but the Supreme Court is of the opinion that the Fascist military formations constitute a perman-ent danger to the safety of the State, and cannot have the protection of federal law. The Federal Government three months ago prohibited the wearing of political "shirts."
