The spa resort of Ragaz-Pfaefers located near the romantic Tamina gorge, and described as the richest thermal spring in Switzerland, already witnessed a period of prosperity in the sixteenth century, when the noted physician Theophrastus Paracelsus practised here. The modern spa resort dates back to 1867 when a franchise granted by the Canton St. Gallen came into effect for a one hundred year term, which recently was extended up to the year 2017. As a result the road was cleared for a thorough rejuvenation of this unique resort. In the 1957 season a new bathing establishment featuring a Medical Institute complete with all up-to-date installations of balneotherapy, will be available to Ragaz Spa's many guests. It will be connected with the existing thermal indoor swimming pool as well as with the two leading hotels, Hof Ragaz and Quellenhof by way of a covered passage.

To relieve the public thermal pool the Grand Hotel Quellenhof is to have its own bathing facilities and is now undergoing complete modernisation, while the renovation of the hotel Hof Ragaz is already accomplished. The golf course will be extended to 18 holes, and well known landscape architects are supervising the enlargement and remodelling of the "Kurpark". A new casino, an open-air thermal swimming pool, "minigolf" links and other recreation and sports facilities will be added attractions. Ragaz Spa with its numerous sporting and excursion possibilities is also expected to become a mecca for horseback riders, anglers and mountain climbing enthusiasts. The new aerial cable way to the 9,300ft. Piz Sol Mountain is of special appeal to alpinists and affords the enjoyment of winter sports till the early summer.

Finishing touches will soon be added to the new Astoria Hotel on Pilatus Street, Lucerne's "Fifth Avenue". The traditional hotel scheme has been literally turned upside down in this instance. Guests will enter an express lift right on the side-walk, where a row of ultra-modern shops occupy the ground-floor of the hotel, and will be whisked in a few seconds to the hotel lobby, located on the floor below the roof garden and affording an unequalled panoramic view of the town, the surrounding mountains and Lake Lucerne. After registering at the desk the guests are escorted downstairs to their rooms. All 100 rooms of this "Hotel Garni" — or bed-and-breakfast hotel — are with private bath and other modern facilities. Near the lake promenade the construction of another

The "Innkeepers' Parliament" — the General Assembly of the Association of Swiss Restaurateurs and Café-keepers — recently convened in Zurich for its annual meeting. According to the activity report of 1955, the membership was 18,303 strong. In order to become a qualified restaurant owner or manager in Switzerland, it is necessary to graduate successfully from a vocational school teaching the many-faceted services of hospitality, ranging from gastronomy to the art of human relations and the ability to cater to individual tastes. In compliance with these standards licenses were issued to 1,477 graduates last year. During the peak of the tourist season the demand for qualified cooks and waiters usually has to be satisfied partly by reinforcing kitchen brigades from abroad. By the end of 1955, as revealed by the annual report, television sets were installed in 2,580 Swiss restaurants; only 1447 existed in the previous year. One of the problems which came up for discussion during the General Assembly was the planned improvement of the Swiss motor road network which was greatly acclaimed by the delegates. The official Swiss restaurant schools in Geneva and Zurich, as it was also mentioned, enjoy an ever increasing popularity with professional students from many countries.

Fifty years ago, in the same year as the Simplon tunnel was completed, the Railway Company "Bern-Lötschberg-Simplon" was founded, with the object to construct the Lötschberg railway line. In the summer of 1913 the first standard gauge electrical mountain railway of Europe materialized. The construction cost of this internationally important mountain railway link through Bernese territory amounted to 135 million francs. The Lötschberg railway often abbreviated to BLS (Bern-Lötschberg-Simplon), is the shortest connection from the Swiss capital of Berne via the Canton of Valais and Simplon tunnel to Italy. Daily inter-city streamliners connect the cities of Berne and Milan by way of the Lötschberg-Simplon in $4\frac{1}{2}$ hours, as well as Berne and Genoa in $7\frac{3}{4}$ hours.

There are at least two places in Switzerland this summer, where one can make the "personal acquaintance" of William Tell, the legendary hero of freedom. In the outdoor theatre of Interlaken, with the majestic background of the Bernese Oberland mountains, the saga of Tell will be dramatized by local amateurs every Thursday evening and Sunday afternoon from July 15 to September 9. The great success of the performances in recent years has made it possible for the Tell Theatrical Group to intensify and modernize the lighting of the theatre to such an extent that the evening performances promise to be extremely popular. The plays will be directed by Wilfried Scheitlin. — In Altdorf, according to legend the native home of the hero, the Play House will present the Tell drama on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons during the same period. Altdorf is located at a short distance from Fluelen, the southernmost point of the excursion boat service of Lake Lucerne, and is easily reached by railway from Lucerne, as well as from Zurich and Bale.

The Jungfrauoch Research Centre.

The research centre at Jungfrauoch, 11,723 ft. a.s.l., situated near the highest railway terminal in Europe, will commemorate this coming Summer its 25th anniversary. During the past year 15 research teams from Switzerland, Germany, England, France and Belgium have visited the institute. One third of the working days spent at the research centre by scientists and their staff were devoted to scientific studies of cosmic rays as well as astronomical observations, one fifth to meteorology and the rest to research work in the fields of physiology and glaciology. Several new buildings have been added to the research institute in recent years.

A New Swiss Holiday Resort.

The Gruyere district, in the southern part of the Canton of Fribourg, with its green meadows and pastures, rare alpine flowers and historical towns, ranges among the most scenic regions in Switzerland. Recently the community of Enney, one of the forgotten villages in these beautiful surroundings, decided to cede a 20-acre strip of land to a future tourist centre. Another 10 acres will be made available to private landowners. About one hundred comfortable chalets, a hotel with 44 beds and restaurant are to be built in this area. The construction of a chairlift has been envisaged as well, providing access during the winter to several excellent ski descents. The project is estimated to cost some five million Swiss francs.
