100 YEARS CITY SWISS CLUB

A century, one hundred yesteryears
Have passed in chequered patterns of the day,
Since those who went before us found a way,
Uniting City from diff'rent spheres.

Who formed this Club, which faithfully adheres
To those great aims which in their purpose lay;
A debt we owe the Founders to repay
For having blazed the trail as pioneers.

What were those aims? To foster friendships true
And cultivate the social graces' gifts,
An open door to any honoured guest,

A welcome just as warm to all of you,
Remembrance of our Homeland, that uplifts,
Kindling the old attachment in each breast.

“GALLUS”.

Crimea's guns still echoed through the air
When first you ventured into London's flow
Of social life. You saw the City grow
In wealth and prestige, and you somehow were Part of it all, and conscious of your share,
The flame you kindled, hundred years ago.
Through the march of time ceased not to glow;
To keep it burning bright shall be our care.

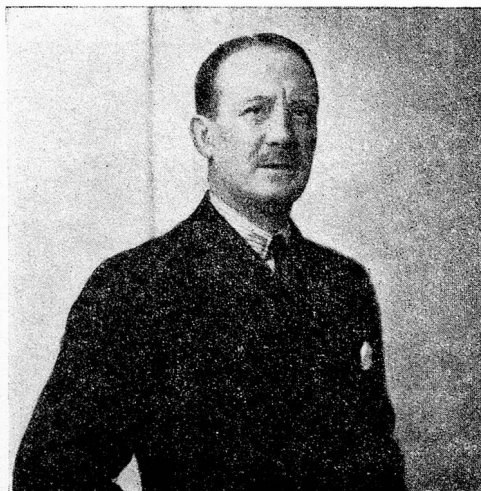

For, to your memory and traditions true,
The path you traced for us we shall pursue,
As grateful guests of this great friendly land
Wherein we shelter, flourish and expand
Yet nothing can supplant, all else apart,
The place our homeland holds within our heart.
