Boy Scouts Camp in Switzerland's "Wild West".

Saignelégier, Switzerland: More than 12,000 boy scouts will pitch tents at Saignelégier, in the "Franche-Comté", the well-known horse-breeding "Wild West" of Switzerland, on July 24th, till August 2nd. As early as 1938 boy scout groups were organised in all the Cantons of Switzerland, and today there are only a few villages which do not have their own small bands of boy scouts in the familiar khaki uniforms. The forest-fringed pasture land between the villages of Saignelégier and Tramelan offers a perfect background for the campers. This 5th Swiss Boy Scouts meeting is expected to stimulate a surge of tourists towards the "Franche-Comté", with many boy scouts and their parents and visitors getting acquainted with this unique region.

The names of the judges — internationally prominent music connoisseurs — will be announced shortly.
