NEWS FROM THE COLONY

NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER, THANKSGIVING AND REPENTANCE

Our National Busstag was celebrated on Sunday, 19th September, by an ecumenical service in which both linguistic communities packed the church at Endell Street. Pastor Marcel Dietler delivered a beautiful sermon on the bearing of the three terms "prayer, thanksgiving and repentance" on Swiss life. He was unmitigating on one of the means by which Switzerland had earned her prosperity, namely the benefits derived from the capitals dishonestly slipped into Swiss banks from poor and needy countries. He said that our national prosperity was not matched by our happiness as a people and recalled that Switzerland's suicide and divorce rates were among the highest in the world. He stated, to the agreement of many among his congregation, that the Swiss were among the "least-smiling people".

On a more personal level, he said that total and undivided commitment to the teachings of Christ was the only way of knowing Him and discovering the power that He gives of living up to His commandments. He ended his sermon by relating a recent spiritual experience that came to him during quite ordinary circumstances, and during which he was seized by the reality of the Lord's personal love. He told his congregation that such experiences, or any other spiritually fulfilling experience, were not the privilege of a few mystics and churchmen. They were open to every person that sincerely "hungered for the Lord".

Our Ambassador, Dr. A. Weitnauer, was among the congregation. Service was followed by a friendly lunch in the hall, symbolically deprived of sweet.

THE "JEUNE GENEVOIS"

This Genevese Fast Day (Jeune genevois) is a holiday. Paradoxically, this is the pretext for all sorts of rejoicings and Genevese continue to celebrate a day of which most of them have forgotten the meaning—now, this day of fasting, far from being a day of rejoicing, is a day of mourning.

It was enacted in 1572 by the Consistory of Geneva, directed at that time by Théodore de Bèze, in memory of thousands of French Protestants put to death in France on 24th August, 1572, in the massacre of the Saint Barthélemy (St. Bartholomew) ordered by Charles IX at the instigation of Catherine de Medici and Henri de Guise. News of the massacre caused distress and great resentment in Geneva, capital city of the Huguenots and inhabited by a great number of French Protestants. Strong fears of attack by the French and the massacre of the inhabitants were dreaded, but happily nothing happened.

Since then, the "Jeune Genevois" has always been observed, except during the few years of French occupation at the beginning of the XIXth century.

It has been definitely fixed for the first Thursday in September and is, with the Escalade, the most ancient Genevese anniversary. Yet, unlike the Escalade, no official manifestation has been foreseen for this anniversary.

MRS. BAERLOCHER ✠

We have the sad duty of announcing the death of Mrs. Marguerite Caroline Baerlocher, widow of Charles Baerlocher, a citizen of St. Gallen, who passed away on September 5th at the age of 89. The funeral was held at Enfield Crematorium on September 9th and her ashes were scattered beside those of her late husband at the Mortlake Crematorium. She leaves two sons and a daughter (Mrs. M. G. Ilesley, of 10 Grove Road, London E.4) and two grandchildren. We should like to assure them of our heartfelt sympathy.

AN UNTOLD LIFE STORY

The people with the most interesting lives are not always those who can show the most visible trappings of material success. But then, what is an interesting life? The notion of "interesting" is conventional and every life is interesting, even if it is spent in a wheel chair. By that token, who knows the wealth of existence belonging to the old people who come to the Swiss Church, or to any other church for that matter? They have the memory of a story which is never told, not only because it lacks in romantic lustre, but because most of the cast of those who played a role in it have already vanished.

The traditional biography is concerned with a remarkable story of success and romance appealing to the idealism of the reader and inspiring him with a wish of emulation. But such a story pertains more to romanticism and the adventure epic than human truth. The really true biographies should be that of a totally unknown person, the absolute average, one who has never achieved anything worth recording in print.

However, the story of Mrs. George Herbert, a frail 85-year-old regular doyen of the Swiss parish in London, is not of this kind, because she has by no means had an "ordinary" existence and is fortunate enough in having a circle of friends who know of it. It is through one of them that I learned that Mrs. Herbert had been Lady-in-waiting to the mistress of Edward VII. This conjured up such a glowing and different chapter of history that I resolved to write her story with her kind permission.

Mrs. Herbert was born in Orvin, in the Jura, in 1886, of a farmer family. She decided at 19 to leave for England, "pour s'épanouir" and worked as an "au pair" in an aristocratic family dwelling at Sherborne Castle, with two daughters from whom she learnt English.

In 1914 she entered the service of Mrs. Newhouse, the wife of an American millionaire and one of King Edward VII's last woman friends. Mrs. Newhouse was discreet regarding her five years of association with the then Prince of Wales, and Mrs. Herbert could not therefore enliven this anecdotal chapter of history from any personal angle. All she could say was that Mrs. Newhouse had accompanied the Prince of Wales for many seasons at Baden Baden, had followed him to the Ritz hotels of Paris and other glamorous places, while the life-loving Prince left Princess Alexandra at home, ignoring his Victorian background.

With Mrs. Newhouse, she went to America twice. It was a gay life. In New York, they stayed at the Ritz Carlton, sharing an apartment (for her mistress) and a three-room suite for herself. In the "Lusitania", the ill-fated liner which they took on their westward bound journey, they had a State Apartment.

Mrs. Herbert followed her wealthy mistress across America to Utah, where Mr. Newhouse had started his fortune, and Salt Lake City, where he owned the majestic Newhouse Hotel. There, she had an insight of Mormon life. She visited the Tabernacle and the harem where Brigham Young, founder of the
