SWITZERLAND IN BRITAIN'S CULTURAL LIFE

Monola Asensio the Swiss ballerina whose profile was published in the August 1976 issue of the Swiss Observer, will again dance leading roles including Odette/Odile, "Swan Lake", in the London Festival Ballet's summer season at the Royal Festival Hall. She will have returned from the United States where she performed with London Festival Ballet in New York and Washington. Besides dancing leading roles in "Romeo and Juliet" and "Giselle", she was chosen by Rudolf Nureyev as his partner in his first performance of "Scheherazade". Monola Asensio also appeared in Salzburg in June with Rudolf Nureyev in "Le Cosare".

Heinz Holliger was born in Langenthal in 1939. He began to play the recorder at four followed two years later by piano lessons and his first attempts at composition. He showed interest in the oboe at an early age but was not able to start lessons until the age of 11. Up to the age of 19, while still at grammar school, Holliger studied simultaneously at the Berne Conservatoire, specialising in the oboe and composition. He spent a year at the Paris Conservatoire, where he first met Messiaen, and at the same time began to study composition with Pierre Boulex in Basle. Shortly after leaving the Conservatoire in 1959 he won first prize in the Geneva competition, subsequently joining the Basle Orchestra, of which he remained a member until 1963. His career as an international soloist developed rapidly after he won the Munich competition in 1961, with annual visits to Japan and engagements throughout Europe, the U.K., U.S.A. and Scandinavia. Holliger is one of the most progressive musicians alive today and is arguably the world's leading exponent of the oboe. He is an avid experimenter with both the technique of the oboe and his own compositions but is equally interested in the repertoire and styles of the baroque and classical periods. Many leading contemporary composers have been attracted to write books for him and for the oboe and harp duo which he has with his wife, Ursula.

Heinz Holliger has appeared frequently in recent years in Britain and was soloist at two Promenade concerts in 1976.

Karl Anton Richenbacher, the Swiss conductor whose profile was published in January 1978 issue of the Swiss Observer, was appointed in October 1977 principal conductor of the B.B.C. Scottish Symphony Orchestra. He took up his post on 1st January 1978 and has conducted the orchestra on many occasions in Scotland. Several lunch-hour concerts were broadcast live on Radio 3. The two concerts at the Promenade Concerts are his débuts in London with the orchestra.

Tamas Vasary, born in Hungary, began his musical studies at the age of six. His first public appearance was at the age of eight, and the following year he gave his first solo recital in his native city. Not long thereafter he was introduced to Dohnanyi, who supervised Vasary's early studies in both piano and composition. Vasary gained his diploma at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest at the age of 20, and in the same year was made assistant professor to Kadaly.

In 1956 Vasary left Hungary to settle first in Belgium and then in Switzerland. He made his London début in 1961 and soon gave concerts in most of the major European cities. He began a series of tours which have taken him to every continent. He has visited the major festivals such as Salzburg (during the Golden Jubilee Year), Edinburgh and Berlin and he has played with many eminent orchestras and conductors. He made his conducting début in Paris in 1973 and in Britain in 1975. Tamas Vasary and his wife are both Swiss citizens; they are now resident in London.

EDINBURGH INTERNATIONAL FESTIVAL 1978

Zürich Opera will bring their much acclaimed cycle of Monteverdi Operas to the King's Theatre, directed and designed by Jean-Pierre Ponnelle and arranged and conducted by Nikolaus Harnoncourt. There will be two performances each of "L'Orfeo", "Il Ritorno d'Ulisse" and "L'Incoronazione di Poppea". Casts include Philippe Huttenlocher, who recently made his British début at the English Bach Festival, as Orfeo, Reingard Didusch as Euridice, Werner Hollweg as Ulisse, Ortrun Wenkel as Penelope, Rachel Yakar as Poppea and Eric Tappy as Nerone.

This forthcoming visit, which is being sponsored by the Pro Helvetia Foundation and a number of Swiss companies, firms and banks, will be the first time the company has ventured outside the European mainland. Already this year the Zürich Opera has scored notable successes, accompanied by excellent reviews from the press. This was at the Hamburg State Opera last January and in Vienna in May. Immediately after the Edinburgh Festival the company will visit Berlin. Further engagements include Milan, Florence, Wiesbaden and Belgium.

of the world's trade

The total value of international trade increased by 13 per cent in 1977, according to the first estimates, to total 1,150 billion dollars, the rate of increase being similar to that recorded in 1976; in real terms, the growth fell to barely four per cent compared with 11 per cent in 1976. With regard to both imports (43 billion francs, i.e. +16.7 per cent) and exports (42.4 billion francs, i.e. +13.8 per cent), Switzerland set new records: the increase in real value was 10.1 per cent and 11.8 per cent respectively. Switzerland's economic existence depends to a large extent on international trade, for the part played by exports of goods and services in the gross national product as a whole is very large and is expected to be slightly more than 35 per cent in 1977, according to the first estimates. Switzerland's share of world trade therefore (1.6 per cent in 1977 compared with 1.5 per cent in 1976) remained practically unchanged.
