

Living pictures

Autor(en): [s.n.]

Objektyp: Article

Zeitschrift: Textiles suisses [Édition française]

Band (Jahr): - (1952)

Heft 4

PDF erstellt am: 17.07.2024

Persistenter Link: <https://doi.org/10.5169/seals-792557>

Nutzungsbedingungen

Die ETH-Bibliothek ist Anbieterin der digitalisierten Zeitschriften. Sie besitzt keine Urheberrechte an den Inhalten der Zeitschriften. Die Rechte liegen in der Regel bei den Herausgebern.

Die auf der Plattform e-periodica veröffentlichten Dokumente stehen für nicht-kommerzielle Zwecke in Lehre und Forschung sowie für die private Nutzung frei zur Verfügung. Einzelne Dateien oder Ausdrucke aus diesem Angebot können zusammen mit diesen Nutzungsbedingungen und den korrekten Herkunftsbezeichnungen weitergegeben werden.

Das Veröffentlichen von Bildern in Print- und Online-Publikationen ist nur mit vorheriger Genehmigung der Rechteinhaber erlaubt. Die systematische Speicherung von Teilen des elektronischen Angebots auf anderen Servern bedarf ebenfalls des schriftlichen Einverständnisses der Rechteinhaber.

Haftungsausschluss

Alle Angaben erfolgen ohne Gewähr für Vollständigkeit oder Richtigkeit. Es wird keine Haftung übernommen für Schäden durch die Verwendung von Informationen aus diesem Online-Angebot oder durch das Fehlen von Informationen. Dies gilt auch für Inhalte Dritter, die über dieses Angebot zugänglich sind.

Living
pictures

« Sun flowers » by van Gogh ;
« Dancer on the stage » by Degas.

Three sketches by Jean Peltier for « Woman with a parasol »
 by Monet

« Tulips » by Cezanne

« Nafea » by Gauguin

Must the masterpieces of the great painters remain forever in the silence of the museums, as if surrounded by too formalist a respect cutting them off from all contact with life, stifling their call and cancelling their message? It is possible to think not, without it being considered a crime, and a Zurich silk manufacturer and admirer of impressionist painting, Mr. Rudolf Brauchbar, has gone even further. Feeling that certain painters would not object to seeing one or another of their works reproduced for other purposes than that of decorating a gallery or salon, he has chosen eight masterpieces and used them to adorn silk squares. No, this is not sacrilege, for this manufacturer possesses a genuine and enlightened love not only of impressionist painting but also for his profession. That is to say that he could never have been satisfied with anything less than the best and that he has consequently taken every artistic precaution necessary. Once a choice had been made of the paintings — after first considering their suitability for reproduction on silk twill, it was necessary, before setting to work, to overcome certain difficulties of an administrative nature: obtaining the necessary authorisations and copyrights from the directors of the Museum of Fine Arts, and making the necessary arrangements with the organisations for the protection of artistic property, (for certain works are still legally protected and the heirs of the painters receive certain royalties on the proceeds of the sale of the scarves). Next, the Parisian artist, Jean Peltier, set to work in the museums making faithful copies of the eight paintings, taking care to use only a specific scale of colours, in order to make it possible for the pictures to be printed on fabric by means of sixteen colours. There is no need to dwell on the technical difficulties, the extreme precision of the work demanded by the preparation of the sixteen stencils and the colours, and the care that had to be taken in the printing. Each painting is left in its original colours — simplified only as we have just described—but exists with four different tones for the frames. Whether one likes or dislikes the subjects chosen, whether one appreciates seeing them reproduced in the form of scarves or not, one cannot but admire the artistic integrity and technical skill of this undertaking. Our main object in writing these few lines has been to call attention to the artistic, technical and commercial success of this venture.

« Memories of Marissel »
 by Corot

« Small girl with a watering
 can » by Renoir

« Rowers at Argenteuil »
 by Manet

Photo Matter.

Stehli & Cie, Zurich

Taffetas shantung imprimé pure soie.
Pure silk printed shantung taffeta.

Modèle Algo, Zurich

Tafetán Shantung estampado, de pura seda.
Bedruckter Taffetas Shantung aus reiner Seide.